Advice of an Old M. D. to a Younger One.

My Dear Nephew: I am glad you are now an accepted M. D., as it will free both your widowed mother and myself from the heavy expense of—well, we'll say your education. As to your future, a little advice may not come amiss. Settle wherever you please. Men are as sick and credulous in Chicago as in New York.

In opening an office, choose the shady side of a street and use a north room. Sunny of fices are too conducive to convalescence. In decorating the wall, choose appropriately. A good engraving of a dissecting room, a few colored lithographs of remarkable tumors, a skull, a baby in a bottle, and several worn-out scalpels and trocars are neat and very effective.

A model office for an M. D.

On your center table keep a chemistry, an anatomy, a few medical journals, and a pathology turned down at the chapter of consumption. Patients, while awaiting your return, are sure to read something. A novel turns their mind away to roving topics. Besides, I have noticed that one-half, and the best half of your callers, come in respect to respiratory troubles. Of course they won't have consumption; but still it is excellent (professionally) that they should realize the possible outcome of their indiscretion.

Let your conversation evidence the noble calling you have chosen. Never fall into the vulgar practice of employing everyday words. It does not sound so well, nor does it pay, either. For temperance or habit, use dialects; for opinion, diagnosis; for head, eye, throat and heart, cerebral, optic, laryngeal and cardiac. You can charge thirty dollars for an enteritis, where you'd get a scant three for a stomach ache. Many words in your vocabulary have been the tail and the neck of a possible purchaser—Yes, Young Artist—That's Jonah.

In treating the sick, use upon the poor only the latest remedies. This, in the main, is quicker and more efficacious. Frequently you will thus gain valuable information as to new discoveries, and so be enabled to avoid mistakes as to your wealthy patients. With the rich be slow and deliberate. It sometimes injures the constitution when convalescence is too rapid; it also injures your status and your bank account. After restoration to health, keep up a mild tonic treatment. Most patients enjoy this for four or five weeks, and so justify 15 or 20 additional visits.

In your conduct be dignified and learned with men; suave and confidential with women; affectionate and mischievous with children. Be the repository of all family secrets, and keep on friendly terms with the servants and the family lawyer.

By following out these rules, my dear Charles, you will attain eminence in our profession, and will accumulate, if not a fortune, at least that competence which assures one of the respect, admiration and regard of himself and of society at large.

Your affectionate uncle,
JERRY GALL.

Seasonable.
(From Stuff and Nonsense, Chas. Scribner's Sons.)

This corpulent lunatic cried:
"By gravity, I'm going to slide."
But he slipped and he fell.

And his friends couldn't tell
Where he went to, though vainly they tried.

Why Do Tramps Travel?

(Texas Siftings.)
A tramp stopped at a house in the suburbs of Houston, and said to the lady of the house:
"Please give a poor man who is traveling, and who is far away from home, a trifle to help pay his expenses."
"If you haven't got money enough to pay your expenses, why do you travel?" she asked in astonishment.

Settled on the Spot. (Detroit Free Press.)

After standing in front of the store for several minutes, seemingly undecided what to do, he entered and asked for the proprietor, and then began:

"My ole woman was gwine 'long yere las' night an' fell down on your sidewalk an' busted her elbow."

"Ab! Well, being you are a poor man I'll make the charges as light as possible."

"But dat hain't de case, sah. A lawyer tells me dat you is 'sponsible fur dat slippery sidewalk, an' dat I kin git damages."

"Exactly, but you don't understand the matter. In the first place you must fee your lawyer and put up for court expenses. Then you prove that I own the sidewalk. Then you prove that your wife was not guilty of contributory negligence. Then you prove that your wife didn't bust her elbow by falling down stairs. Then I appeal the case, and the higher court grants a new trial. By that time your wife and her busted elbow are dead and buried and you are married again, and you offer to settle for five pounds of brown sugar."

"Fo de Lawd! but I got to wade frew all dat!"

"All that and more. The grocery business is cut so close that I shall probably be a bankrupt by April, and then what good will a judgment do you?"

"Dat's so—dat's so."

"Or the case may hang in the supreme court until both of us are dead."

"I see. And you would gin two pounds of brown sugar to settle de case now?"

"And you would gin two pounds of brown sugar to settle it?"

"Well, yes."
"Den you may do it up, and arter dis de ole woman takes de odder side of de street or we dissolve partnership! I spected ebory minit you war gwine to twist it around to levy on my household goods, and if I'm two pounds of sugar ahead I want to close de case to once afore you bring in a bill fur contributory piracy!"

An Artistic Drawing.
(New York Sun.)

"Young Artist (displaying a picture)—This painting is entitled 'Jonah and the Whale.' Possible Purchaser—Where is Jonah? Young Artist—You notice the rather distended appearance of the whale's stomach midway between the tail and the neck? Possible Purchaser—Yes. Young Artist—That's Jonah."

Macon Telegraph: A Chinaman has run away with a Chicago man's wife. It is understood that the husband encouraged the thing because he hates Chinamen.

Mark Twain Wins a Hat.
(New York Star.)

"I'll bet you a new hat I can invent a question that a dozen men will return the same answer to," said Mark Twain casually as he was lounging in a smoking car on the New York Central one day last week.

"I'll take that," said a Canadian publisher, who had just made it up with the author after the two had gotten all the free advertising they could out of a threatened libel suit.

"Produce your question."

"It is this," said Mark. "Have you heard that Smith is dead?"

The judges went through the whole train, and every man, woman and child who was asked the question replied:

"What Smith?"

"Twain wears the hat—the largest size known to the trade—for his head enlarged considerably after that triumph."

Of Course They Were Engaged.
(Baltimore Telegram.)

The passengers for some time had been regarding the affectionate gestures of a young couple who occupied a seat near the center of the car. It was evident that they loved each other to death. Just then the train stopped at a station, the incoming passengers speedily found seats, saving two ladies who came in late, to find themselves occupying a stand-up ticket. They stopped just behind the seat of the lover-like couple, and glanced hesitatingly about for a vacant pew. Then one of the ladies softly said:

"They seem to be engaged."

The lover-like couple separated like a flash, and the girl, with a very red face, angrily retorted:

"Of course we are. You don't s'pose I'd set here letting him squeeze my hand in public if we wa'n't, do you?"

The ladies were petrified, but the other passengers took it all in and there was a burst of applause that stopped the train.

Look Here, Ladies.

Numbers of women and girls are learning the business of fruit grafting in all its forms. They make very neat and handy workmen. The labor is not severe. It is the healthiest of healthy occupations and considerably more fascinating than sitting humped over a hideous "crazy quilt," blinding the eyesight and getting dyspepsia. Try it, girls. You will then know how to have delicious fruit for your table whether your husband is one of the old hunk kind of farmers or not, or indeed whether you have any husband at all or not.
